Monday 18th November 15.15-17.00. 1453-415 (Bed og Arbejd)

For the Lutheran Reformers, Luther and Melanchthon, the aim for theology was consolation of the anxious soul. After 1528, the care of doctrine became important for both. Reading the lesser-known German version of Melanchthon’s Loci, this project will revise the understanding of the internal relationship between Melanchthon and Luther and give new insight in how the consolatory revolution in Wittenberg impacted on doctrine and society.
